Visiting Artist Lecture – RICHARD KLEIN, INTERDISCIPLINARY ARTIST: at WCSU Visual and Performing Arts Center

October 28 @ 11:00 am - 12:00 pm

Free & Open to the Public

Richard Klein is a Connecticut-based artist, independent curator, and writer. As an artist, he has utilized found objects in his sculptural work since the late 1990s. The objects are often commonplace castoffs from our material culture, sourced from tag sales and flea markets. His use of glass (bottles, eyeglass lenses, mirrors) speaks to his interest in transparency and reflection. Recent works have incorporated natural organisms and elements, such as fungi and copper, with obsessive craftsmanship, repetition, and accumulation ever-present.

Klein's artwork has been exhibited widely throughout the U.S. and in London, England. Shows include the Neuberger Museum of Art, Purchase, New York; Caren Golden Fine Art, NYC; John Michael Kohler Arts Center, Sheboygan, Wisconsin; deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum, Lincoln, Massachusetts; The Portland Institute of Contemporary Art, Oregon; Schoolhouse Gallery, Provincetown, Massachusetts; Katonah Museum of Art, New York; Brattleboro Museum and Art Center, Vermont; Ortega y Gasset Projects, Brooklyn, New York; and Kenise Barnes Fine Art, Kent, Connecticut. Reviews of his work have appeared in The New York Times, Sculpture Magazine, Art in America, and The New Yorker, among others.
